THEY stood beneath the summer skies and watched the twinkling stars in ceaseless brilliancy twink. It was a night to bring the angels from the blue, that they might lay their gentle hands upon the evening air, and touching every heart string, fill the world with harmony. "And this is love," she said, looking into his face. "And love is religion," he continued, stooping to kiss the pretty pinkness of her cheek. "What religion?" she asked, naively. "Presbyterian, or Methodist, or Baptist, or Episcopalian?" "None of these, angel mine," he whispered, folding her to his throbbing heart; "none of these; it is You-an-I-tarian." Devotional exercises were continued until a late hour.—Ex.

THE British nobility have adopted the style of settling their disagreements by fighting fist fights in the street, when they happen to meet. Such a fight took place the other day between Sir George Chetwynd and Lord Lonsdale. The telegraph does not say as to whether the rules of any particular school of bruisers were observed or not, but the fact seems to be that it was a genuine rough-and-tumble fight, without any particular science being used, much the same kind as one would expect to see between two bar-room loafers. The result, however, seems to have been eminently satisfactory, as both the noblemen came off with badly disfigured faces and blood stained and dirt dragged clothes.
